BRANCH BANKS IN CANADA.

The steady increase in the total amount of business done by Canadian banks is attributed by Consul Ryder to the establishment of branch banks in small places, of which there were on Dec. 1 of last year 1,916. These branches represent thirty chartered banks of the Dominion having head offices in commercial centers. The chartered banks also maintain sixteen branches in the United States, twenty-four in Cuba and the West Indies, three in London, one in Paris and one in Mexico City, and there is no limit to the branches a chartered bank may establish.

That the Canadian banking system works well and for the benefit of all, there can be no possible doubt, the country merchants, lumber manufacturers with limited capital and commercial interests generally being enabled to get money from branches of the big institutions which an independent bank with small capital and little surplus could not see its way clear to lend. Where there is a heavy demand for money at these interior points and the security is good, sufficient funds are transferred from the vaults of the chartered banks to the branches and business is kept moving to the great benefit of both borrower and lender.

It is said an immense amount of business is transacted by these branch banks scattered in the apparently obscure towns of Canada, and the amounts of money thus gathered and forwarded to the parent institution materially increase the funds at its disposal and enlarge its influence in the trade centers of the Dominion. Every one of these branches maintains a savings department, where interest is paid quarterly at 3 per cent per annum on daily balances. These, in addition to the post-office and government savings banks, have educated the Canadian people to acquire the saving habit, while the benefits naturally accruing from such thrift are plainly visible in every direction.

This country is still pottering along with its far-famed and justly celebrated monetary commission, Senator Aldrich at the head and Representative Vreeland at the tail. Some time in the dim and distant future, perhaps, a report to congress will be made and the life of the commission extended, more trips abroad and conferences with Morgan, and then some changes may be made in our banking and currency system.

In the meantime notice should be taken of the fact that when the Canadians start to accomplish any given result, they do not let the grass grow under their feet.

MILES COULD ALSO RIDE.

The recent spectacular performance of the president in riding ninety-eight miles in a fraction of over seventeen hours was not such an extraordinary feat, after all. Perhaps Bryan couldn't cover the ground in the same length of time, and it is certain that Mr. Taft would fall off before he got half way even if the horses managed to stagger along under his weight. Since so much has been said about Roosevelt's ride, the fact that Lieutenant General Miles, at the age of 64, beat the executive's record all hollow has been recalled. On July 15, 1903, the following dispatch was sent out from El Reno, Okla.:

"Lieutenant General Miles rode horseback to Fort Reno from Fort Sill, ninety miles away, today, in nine hours and ten minutes. The trip was made to prove that General Miles at the age of retirement—64 years—is still in good physical condition. General Miles left Fort Sill at 5:30 this morning and rode into Fort Reno at 2:30 p. m. Forty minutes later he reviewed the troops there. The record-breaking part of the trip was the thirty-five-mile stretch between Fort Sill and Anadarko. This was accomplished in two hours and twenty-five minutes."

"On the trip the general had nine mounts. Captain Sayre of the Eighth cavalry made the ride with him. The rest of the escort used government teams and ambulances. The general was the freshest looking man in the party. He wore dark trousers and canvas leggings, light blue shirt and white helmet. As he dismounted he remarked:

"I enjoyed every moment of the trip. There was one time I felt particularly good. That was when I came up to the men who had charge of the pack teams, just south of the Canadian river. They had a luncheon ready and I enjoyed it with them. It made me feel extra good."

The general showed no signs of even being tired. Dedicating the twenty minutes spent at luncheon and the time consumed in making the remounts, the ride was made in eight hours. General Miles weighs 275 pounds."

There used to be much gossip about the porcelain bathtub General Miles was alleged to have lotted about the country with him, and his spick and span appearance in general, but he was the real thing when it came to fighting Indians or riding over long stretches of country. It would have been an insult to ask the former commander of the army to take the test recently prescribed for officers. The task would have been too easy.

CAUSE OF INTERTEMPERANCE.

According to the report of the New York state labor commissioner, lack of ventilation is the cause of intemperance to a certain extent, and the medical inspector agrees with him. The latter states that while eight to ten parts of carbon dioxide in ten thousand volumes of air is considered the limit, in laundries, tailoring shops, printing offices, lithographing and other mechanical plants it runs much higher, from eighteen to thirty-five parts. The use of gas for heating and illuminating purposes and failure to install proper ventilating plants is given as the cause.

"This unsanitary condition," the report says, "produces a condition of lethargy, hence the resort to stimulants, which is somewhat prevalent among tailors. As many of the workers are young, there is a tendency toward intemperance and deterioration."

Most of the poor creatures who toil for a bare existence in the factories and workshops of the large cities on the Atlantic coast have but little opportunity for infusing their lungs with pure air. From tenement to workshop and back again, day after day, with foul and noxious vapors at each end of the route. No wonder that the use of stimulants is necessary to enable the hapless victims to muster up sufficient strength to go through the ordeal of another day.

One thing the workmen of the west can be thankful for is pure air.

NOT KEEPING UP WITH NEWS.

In the Weekly Financial Review of J. S. Bache & Co., bankers of New York, the following statement is made:

"Since election we have not heard much of the bank deposit guarantee plan. The law is in operation in Oklahoma, and its influence has been thus far to increase deposits in state banks. Twenty national banks have denationalized and become state institutions. Nothing has broken out yet, but a dangerous situation is developing."

The above was probably intended for consumption in the financial district, where the deposit plan is violently and vehemently opposed. Considerable has been heard about the matter since election and bills have been introduced in half a dozen different state legislatures which are reasonably certain to become laws. In addition, it can be stated that more will be heard about the guarantee of deposits in the future. The talk of men getting into the banking business who are dishonest or who lack experience is the very best bosh. Four bankers were sent to prison one day last week in the federal court at Pittsburgh, and two others remain to be sentenced by the same judge. Dishonest men engage in the banking business now, and that some of the bank officials lack experience is amply proven by the fact that many of them plead ignorance when arraigned at the bar of justice.

The same men who are fighting the guarantee plan are trying to defeat the postal savings bill. They may succeed in blocking the passage of this last measure through congress, but the state legislatures will take the necessary action to protect depositors.

The request of the president that he be allowed to remove certain furniture from the White House at the conclusion of his term of office has been withdrawn. The action of Speaker Cannon in referring the matter to the house appropriations committee, of which Tawney of Minnesota is chairman and Judge Smith of Iowa a leading member, had much to do with the withdrawal.

A Chicago man, one Bernard J. Flynn, has filed a bill of injunction to restrain his wife, Norah, from talking. Just how the court would be enabled to enforce its orders in case the injunction should be granted is unknown, but the experiment will be watched with intense interest from one end of the country to the other in case his honor should care to make the attempt.

The action of the New York stock exchange in expelling a member is all the more remarkable when the fact that his alleged offense was committed eight years ago is taken into consideration.

"PINK PILLS ARE THE ONLY MEDICINE THAT HELPED ME"

A Knoxville, Iowa, Woman Cured
of Stomach Trouble Complicated With Lumbago
Praises Dr. Williams'
Pink Pills.

If you are sick do not be discouraged. Do not abandon hope.

A majority of those who have been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills state that they had tried other treatments and other remedies in vain. Such a case is that of Mrs. N. A. Stentz, of Knoxville, Iowa, who says:

"I can recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills very highly as they are the only medicine that helped me after years of suffering. I was troubled with indigestion, had no appetite and what I ate distressed and made me sick to my stomach. I had been in this condition for a long time, when I began to have terrible pains in my back. They were so severe that I couldn't bend over nor turn in bed and had to be pulled up by my hands, when lying down. My stomach trouble had often compelled me to go to bed for a short time, but when these pains in my back came on, I had to give up and stay in bed. Even then I got but little rest or relief.

"The doctors said I was suffering from lumbago complicated with chronic stomach trouble. After I had been in bed for some time and was in despair of getting well, as the doctors were not helping me, my son, who had heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills while in the army in the Philippine Islands, brought me a box of the pills. It was about a week before I felt they were helping me and I must have taken them for over a month. I then felt cured and my stomach and back haven't troubled me since. I gained in weight and have been healthier than at any time since I was a young girl. I always keep the pills on hand and cannot praise them enough."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have corrected serious disorders of the stomach and restored to health sufferers from severe disorders of the blood and nerves. For many forms of weakness and debility, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are recommended even if ordinary remedies have been tried without relief.

Sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.
